

KENNEDY TRIAL STOPS FOR LACK OF WITNESSES.

Prosecution Apparently Embarrassed Makes a Sudden Request for Adjournment and Case Goes Over Till Monday.

Crowd Mobbed Court-Room at Opening To-Day Anxious to Get a Look at Heroic Wife of Accused Man.

The doors of Justice Furman's court, where Dentist Samuel J. Kennedy is on trial for the murder of Dolley Reynolds, were besieged by a great crowd today. It was there long before the court officers arrived and was so tightly massed in the entrance. The case has taken on an intense interest because of the heroic fight which Mrs. Kennedy is making for her husband.

The usual affecting scene took place this morning when Dr. Kennedy was brought from the Tombs to the court and kissed his wife. There were tears in the eyes of both. Then she parted him on the back and hopefully smiled.

She is not a strong-minded woman by any means. She is simply a tender hearted, devoted wife and mother, and she is undergoing the agony of continuing emotions. She may lose her husband and she may lose her three-year-old boy, who is at his State Island home suffering from whooping cough.

Often during the long hours of yesterday's trial the mother's thoughts wandered far from the court-room, across the stretch of water between the city and Staten Island, and fastened on the little youngster in his bedroom. Perhaps her little one was in convulsions for all she knew. The thought was agonizing.

Mrs. Kennedy's Oration.

Then she would be brought back to the realities of the present by the pitiless accusations of the witnesses from the Grand Hotel who stood pointing at her husband.

"He is the man," they were saying. "And then Mrs. Kennedy, her heart."

KENNEDY, HANDCUFFED, EMBRACED BY HIS WIFE AS HE COMES OVER THE BRIDGE OF SIGHTS.

MRS. KENNEDY HAPPY IN BELIEF OF ACQUITTAL

I am afraid to tell how happy I feel for fear that the cup shall be dashed from my lips. I have heard these witnesses before, and now, as I listen to them again, I wonder how a jury could have convicted my husband on such testimony.

We are all greatly pleased at the way things are going and I am personally thankful for the sympathy which has been extended to us from all quarters. I receive many letters, the writers of which assure me of their sympathy and hope that my husband will be restored to me. And I know that he will.

He is innocent beyond a doubt in my mind, and if truth and justice prevail, as they should, he will be acquitted.

MARION EATON KENNEDY.

SPANIARDS HISS BELGIUM MAY ACT FOR BOERS

Carlisle Whose Son Is to Marry Princess Asturias Met by Mob.

Proposition to Arbitrate Transvaal War Officially Discussed.

MADRID, Feb. 8.—The Count of Caserta, father of Prince Charles of Bourbon, who is to marry the Princess of Asturias, Feb. 11, met with a hostile reception on his arrival here today. He was noted by the crowd and followed some distance from the station by a mob that hissed constantly. Two arrests were made.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 8.—In the Chamber of Deputies today a petition inviting Belgium to offer to arbitrate between Great Britain and the Transvaal was debated at some length.

The marriage between the Princess of the Asturias, eldest daughter of the Queen Regent of Spain, and Prince Charles of Bourbon, second son of the Count of Caserta, head of the Neapolitan branch of the Bourbon family, has not met with the approval of the liberal leaders in Spain.

Even Senor Sagasta, a strong supporter of the dynasty, is on the liberal side. The opposition to the Count is due to the fact that he was chief of the throne of Spain in 1876 and fought against the troops of King Alfonso XII, father of the present King of Spain and of the Princess of the Asturias.

TAMMANY YEARLY ELECTION.

General Committee Expected to Name Present Officers.

GROCER HELD FOR MURDER.

Grocer Fred Hoffman, of 300 East Ninety-third street, who last night was arrested for murdering in the bedroom of his home at 315 East Ninety-third street, during a quarrel in the grocery, was committed without bail in the Harlem Police Court today.

FIRE ON A LIGHTER.

Fire started at 2 A. M. on a lighter lying at Pier 10, Linbeck's Street, Brooklyn.

EDUARD STRAUSS NOT HURT.

Noted Conductor Will Lead His Orchestra in Washington.

60,000 IN REFUGEE CAMPS.

Boers Held by British Now Held by Civilians.

DOCTOR NEAR TO DEATH.

One in His Bedroom Was Turned on by Accident.

STEAMER IN BAD PLIGHT.

Helga Weathers Storms but Crew Rescued and Coal Gored.

MT. VERNON'S DANGER POINT.

Town Wants Railroad Commission to Abolish It.

CHORUS GIRL SHOWED PITY.

Students Who Asked Her to Supper in Free.

COFFEE KNOCKED HIM.

Couldn't Move for 4 Hours After Drinking 2 Cups.

Mrs. Harriet Hubbard Ayer Studies Face of Alleged Murderer of Dolley Reynolds and Finds It Negatively Good.

Analysis Discloses Vanity and Weakness but Not Criminality—Amiable Qualities Also Are Indicated.

BY HARRIET HUBBARD AYER.

If the face is the expression of the individual, Dr. Kennedy is perhaps the last man in the Criminal Court room an unformed person would select as the deadly enemy who repaid a woman's confidence—no matter what the history of that woman might have been—with her brutal murder.

The educated criminal differs far less from the ordinary type than the uninquiring might imagine.

I have never seen a man charged with the crime who looked so little like an assassin as Dr. Kennedy.

Dolley Reynolds' alleged murderer is under the average in stature.

He is shorter, slighter and much younger in appearance than his pictures represent him.

The first impression he makes is that of an extremely amiable but weak young man.

He is good looking, the sort of man very young women find irresistible.

His head at first glance appears to slope abruptly from the crown to the back, but it does not in reality, and the backward slant is caused by the fact that the doctor is prematurely bald and the hair at the fore part of his head, which is soft and curly, is ruffled up and brushed in such a way that it somewhat covers the bald spot and gives a slope which does not exist in the skull formation.

It is by no means a bad head. The upper part of the back is a little flat, which is a sign of selfishness and lack of persistency, and the lower part is full and shows amateness, love of children and also a love of home. It is not a head exhibiting great qualities, but is rather negatively good than otherwise.

The most that can honestly be said of it is that it gives the key to a rather vain and unimpassioned character.

The face carries out this suggestion. The oval is more effeminate than manly.

His Head Narrow.

The head is narrow at the temples, showing lack of ideality, and again below the cheek bones on a line with the mouth indicating inquisitiveness and irresponsibility.

The most peculiar feature is the nose, which is a little in shape and extremely thin. It is the thinnest nose for its length I have ever seen.

It has a distinct downward tilt, an indication of a melancholy temperament.

The symbol for melancholy is apparent in several of Dr. Kennedy's features.

Indeed, the general impression left upon the observer who glances at the defendant in this case would be that of a man steeped in a gentle but permanent sadness.

Dr. Kennedy's nose is the very reverse of the type known as the fighting nose.

It is slightly librate in its formation, but is too narrow, especially at the nostrils, to indicate the commercial and acquisitive characteristics of the well-known Jewish feature.

Lavater, the great physiognomist, says that a thin nose, turning down below, is an uncommunicative and cold subject.

But no one feature can determine the character of man or woman.

I should say Kennedy's nose typified lack of aggressiveness and physical intolerance with a tendency to rather a sentimental melancholy.

The expression of the eyes is gentle in the extreme; it is also sad, and there were times when the defendant looked like a man thoroughly broken hearted—not enraged, but simply crushed under the weight of a terrible misfortune.

The eyebrows are peculiar. They exhibit the arch toward the outer temples.

It is a sign for a weak will—the subject whose upper jaw overlaps the lower one has little tenacity and gives up easily, whereas the man with the

A STUDY OF DR. KENNEDY'S FACE. (Drawn from life in court.)

It is slightly librate in its formation, but is too narrow, especially at the nostrils, to indicate the commercial and acquisitive characteristics of the well-known Jewish feature.

Lavater, the great physiognomist, says that a thin nose, turning down below, is an uncommunicative and cold subject.

But no one feature can determine the character of man or woman.

I should say Kennedy's nose typified lack of aggressiveness and physical intolerance with a tendency to rather a sentimental melancholy.

The expression of the eyes is gentle in the extreme; it is also sad, and there were times when the defendant looked like a man thoroughly broken hearted—not enraged, but simply crushed under the weight of a terrible misfortune.

The eyebrows are peculiar. They exhibit the arch toward the outer temples.

It is a sign for a weak will—the subject whose upper jaw overlaps the lower one has little tenacity and gives up easily, whereas the man with the

It is slightly librate in its formation, but is too narrow, especially at the nostrils, to indicate the commercial and acquisitive characteristics of the well-known Jewish feature.

Lavater, the great physiognomist, says that a thin nose, turning down below, is an uncommunicative and cold subject.

But no one feature can determine the character of man or woman.

I should say Kennedy's nose typified lack of aggressiveness and physical intolerance with a tendency to rather a sentimental melancholy.

The expression of the eyes is gentle in the extreme; it is also sad, and there were times when the defendant looked like a man thoroughly broken hearted—not enraged, but simply crushed under the weight of a terrible misfortune.

The eyebrows are peculiar. They exhibit the arch toward the outer temples.

It is a sign for a weak will—the subject whose upper jaw overlaps the lower one has little tenacity and gives up easily, whereas the man with the

It is slightly librate in its formation, but is too narrow, especially at the nostrils, to indicate the commercial and acquisitive characteristics of the well-known Jewish feature.

Lavater, the great physiognomist, says that a thin nose, turning down below, is an uncommunicative and cold subject.

But no one feature can determine the character of man or woman.

I should say Kennedy's nose typified lack of aggressiveness and physical intolerance with a tendency to rather a sentimental melancholy.

The expression of the eyes is gentle in the extreme; it is also sad, and there were times when the defendant looked like a man thoroughly broken hearted—not enraged, but simply crushed under the weight of a terrible misfortune.

The eyebrows are peculiar. They exhibit the arch toward the outer temples.

It is a sign for a weak will—the subject whose upper jaw overlaps the lower one has little tenacity and gives up easily, whereas the man with the

It is slightly librate in its formation, but is too narrow, especially at the nostrils, to indicate the commercial and acquisitive characteristics of the well-known Jewish feature.

Lavater, the great physiognomist, says that a thin nose, turning down below, is an uncommunicative and cold subject.

But no one feature can determine the character of man or woman.

I should say Kennedy's nose typified lack of aggressiveness and physical intolerance with a tendency to rather a sentimental melancholy.

The expression of the eyes is gentle in the extreme; it is also sad, and there were times when the defendant looked like a man thoroughly broken hearted—not enraged, but simply crushed under the weight of a terrible misfortune.

The eyebrows are peculiar. They exhibit the arch toward the outer temples.

It is a sign for a weak will—the subject whose upper jaw overlaps the lower one has little tenacity and gives up easily, whereas the man with the

It is slightly librate in its formation, but is too narrow, especially at the nostrils, to indicate the commercial and acquisitive characteristics of the well-known Jewish feature.

Lavater, the great physiognomist, says that a thin nose, turning down below, is an uncommunicative and cold subject.

But no one feature can determine the character of man or woman.

I should say Kennedy's nose typified lack of aggressiveness and physical intolerance with a tendency to rather a sentimental melancholy.

The expression of the eyes is gentle in the extreme; it is also sad, and there were times when the defendant looked like a man thoroughly broken hearted—not enraged, but simply crushed under the weight of a terrible misfortune.

The eyebrows are peculiar. They exhibit the arch toward the outer temples.

It is a sign for a weak will—the subject whose upper jaw overlaps the lower one has little tenacity and gives up easily, whereas the man with the

It is slightly librate in its formation, but is too narrow, especially at the nostrils, to indicate the commercial and acquisitive characteristics of the well-known Jewish feature.

Lavater, the great physiognomist, says that a thin nose, turning down below, is an uncommunicative and cold subject.

But no one feature can determine the character of man or woman.

I should say Kennedy's nose typified lack of aggressiveness and physical intolerance with a tendency to rather a sentimental melancholy.

The expression of the eyes is gentle in the extreme; it is also sad, and there were times when the defendant looked like a man thoroughly broken hearted—not enraged, but simply crushed under the weight of a terrible misfortune.